She excels at everything she does, with her great attitude and ability to get along with everyone she meets. As Director of Events, Alisa's 'can do' mindset puts guests at ease, and gives them the confidence to choose Larkspur for their event.

Born and raised in Indiana, twelve years ago she moved to Vail, longing for the outdoor mountain lifestyle. She landed a position at Beaver Creek Lodge, which became the backbone of her career in event planning. There she met Sally Alward who became friend and mentor, teaching Alisa to apply her personality gifts to the planning of group functions. Alisa progressed to Sales Manager for the company. While there she met the man of her dreams, Rich Steinberg, the company's accountant, who she married in 2004.

A career opportunity for Sally Alward arose at Rocky Mountain Connections, a local destination management company, and Alisa was saddened to see her mentor move on. Shortly thereafter, Alisa was asked to join RMC, too, on Alward's recommendation. Alisa thrived in her new environment and was promoted to Director of Operations, overseeing all the Sales Managers.

In 2005, Alisa decided to make a career move to Red Sky Golf Club to head their events department. She was eager to work with acclaimed chef Thomas Salamunovich, who was consulting for this new project. Again she excelled in her position and Salamunovich offered her the events department at his flagship restaurant, Larkspur.

As a new mom to firstborn Evelyn, Alisa loves her new role in life, but feels her career is a strong part of her identity. When she finds time, she loves yoga, mountain biking, and hiking with her dog, Lucy. And at least once a year, she makes sure she gets to a beach!
