As Larkspur’s General Manager, Rob Sinclair strives “to create a compassionate, supportive and professional work environment where people are challenged to provide superior guest experiences.”

The son of a navy pilot, Rob’s family lived in many locales while he was growing up. His innate perception of human nature is one of the benefits he gained from his youth. He weaves an understanding of guest needs and desires into his leadership of the service staff.

Rob attended high school in Denver and went on to pursue an engineering degree at Ole Miss. A college football enthusiast, his witty personality and sports talk naturally welcomes visitors. The precision of his engineering background is apparent in his analyses of business trends and direction of daily goals, enabling the restaurant to consistently improve its level of service.

Rob started at Larkspur in 2002 after working in Vail’s hospitality industry for several years. He feels his purpose is aligned with Larkspur’s: a commitment to community responsibility, both local and global, from charity fundraising to environmental protection.
